

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

TUESDAY, APRIL 24, 1883

Council meets to-night.
Multnomah county is out of debt, and has cash on hand.

Rebate posters printed cheap at THE ASTORIAN job office.

W. B. Morse, a well-known resident, died at St. Helens last Sunday.

The state board of pilot commissioners will meet here next Tuesday.

Jas. G. Kelly, late baggage master on the O. & C. R. R., died in Portland last Saturday.

E. C. Holden, city assessor, gives a third and last call this morning that any one interested would do well to read.

The annual Episcopal conference for Oregon, will take place in Salem from the 7th to the 10th of June next.

A man has invented a chair that can be adjusted to 800 different positions. It is designed for a boy to sit in when he goes to church.

Hon. A. O. March, of Winchester, Ind., has been appointed register of the land office at Vancouver, W. T., and assumed his position yesterday.

Judge Stott has been presented with $500 cash, and A. G. Walling with a $250 gold watch, as a reward for their services as managers of the Good Templars' Hall association of Portland.

The old rookeries on the corner of Main and Chenamus streets are being torn down. It is the intention of Capt. Flavel, the owner of the property, to erect a substantial brick building 50x100 on that site.

A giant powder explosion near the O. & C. depot at East Portland last Saturday sent fifteen pound boulders flying broadcast. One piece made a hole a foot square in the hurricane deck of the State of California, says the News.

On Saturday Henry Villard and party went from Seattle to Portland. On Sunday they went by special train to the O. & C. front. They return to Portland this morning, where he will meet a delegation from the Astoria chamber of commerce. To-morrow he will talk to Portland citizens in the New Market theater, and on Thursday he will attend a reception in his honor at the house of Senator Dolph.

Engineer Hurlbut has gone to Astoria to make a survey of the railroad route from that place to Portland, connecting with the West Side line at Forest Grove. There will be three corps of engineers in the field, and the work hurried with all possible dispatch. Mr. Hurlbut and his party will begin at Astoria and work this way. It certainly looks from this that there is a strong probability that Mr. Villard's answer to the Astorians, who asked him to surrender the land grant of the Astoria & Forest Grove Railroad company, which had been lying so long idle, will be that he will construct the road, and give our friends at "Venice" land communication. May "the good work go bravely on."—Welcome.

Villard at New Tacoma.

In closing his recent remarks at New Tacoma, Henry Villard said: "I would make free to say that, as always the case in constructing a line through new and unexplored countries, the cost of construction has exceeded the original estimated cost by many millions of dollars, and this deficiency the company would never have been able to meet if it had been obliged to build the Cascade division. The best thing that can be done for you is to complete the main line of the Northern Pacific across the continent. I do not believe there is anybody here or anywhere on the North Pacific coast that will disagree with me in that opinion; therefore I think the Northern Pacific railroad company and myself personally have done you the greatest service in considering only the completion of the main line across the continent at the earliest possible moment, regardless of everything else. [Applause.] It only remains for me to thank you for your kind attention and to express my regrets that I am not able to speak a longer time with you. It was with the greatest difficulty that I could get away from New York at all. I have to steer this ship without much help from others there, and the quicker I return the quicker the main line will be completed. I hope that your present prosperity will continue and all the expectations of the future of your town be realized, and I assure you that what we can do as a corporation and as individuals shall be done."

Salmon Items.

The California fish commissioners have resolved to put 20,000,000 young salmon in California rivers this season. Sacramento fishermen ask seventy cents per fish.

The German-American Grocer, says the newest feature in the canned goods market is a quantity of Japanese salmon, of some 10,000 cases on offer in New York.

The London Grocer's Gazette says: "There is an improved demand from the country for good brands of Columbia river and the northern rivers. Fraser river fish are almost entirely neglected, and the buyers are cautious in dealing in it, after their experience of last year."

The Liverpool correspondent of the London Grocer says:

"The extreme cold weather still keeps salmon out of the minds of our usual large retail buyers, who at this time of the year generally buy a few months' stock. With the exception of a sale to one of our large dealers of about 8,000 cases of one or two brands of Fraser river there is comparatively nothing to report, Columbia river being still held firmly by the original importers, who are well able to carry the present stock over for some months more rather than take lower prices."

Portland's Dredger.

After much wrangling and disputing the public has at last been convinced that the city dredger as a dredger is a success, but its warmest friends have never claimed that it was a snag puller. It seems, however, as if it were destined to achieve notoriety in that line; as Captain Pease, a day or two since, succeeded in hoisting on board a snag eight feet in length and four feet through, which has long lain in the channel at Swan island, and which many ships have touched. So solidly was it embedded that pilots supposed it was a hummock on the bottom of the river. The government snag puller took it off the dredger and landed it at Ross island on her way up the river. The dredger will probably resume work to-morrow as the falling of the Columbia has lowered the Willamette sufficiently to allow of dredging being done to good advantage.—Oregonian.

Doctor in Camp.

You wonder how the miners got along without a doctor in camp, for there were indeed times enough when the services of a skillful physician were in great demand. The winter we put in at Calico flat there was somebody on the sick list all the time, and there were days when we had three or four patients in the hospital at once.

As to medicines, our mainstay was a hot sweat. When a man began to limp around we didn't lose time by feeling of his pulse, or looking at his tongue. Three or four stones were put into the fire to heat, blankets borrowed for the occasion, and when we got steam on the knots and twists and kinks in the chap's case had to unravel. He'd come out as long and flat and thin and white as you please; and if any one pointed a finger at him for the next week, he'd cry like a baby.

Next to a sweat we had decoctions of herbs, barks and roots, and once or twice we tried the earth cure. On one occasion when a red headed miner from Ohio was laid up with a pain in the side, a stranger came along from White Dog Bend and said he could cure him by laying on of hands. For three long hours he smoothed away at the patient as steadily as clock-work, and then there was a row. The "smoother" asserted that the cure was complete, while the patient denied that the pain was a whit easier; and, of course, we stood by our comrade, and gave the stranger a tumble off a cliff twenty-eight feet high into an old snow drift eighteen feet deep.

But, as I said at the start, sickness became so prevalent, and our plain remedies had so little effect, that it was finally decided to send up to Sacramento for a doctor. The idea was to have him come down and brace us all up and the expense was to be borne by a shake purse.

A letter was sent to a dealer in town, asking him to forward a doctor, and in about five days along he came. He was a young man of twenty-four, just landed on the slope without a dollar in his pocket, and all he brought to camp with him was a lancet, some prescription blanks and a stick of salve for making sticking plaster.

There were four men in the hospital that day, and after a bit the doctor entered to take a look at them. It happened that he came to Big Jim Smith first. Smith was threatened with inflammatory rheumatism, and was in no mood to take nonsense. "Run out your tongue," said the doctor, as he bent over the man.

Big Jim displayed it, but in such a begrudging way that it was plain to see he thought it all bosh. "Your pulse," said the doctor, as he reached over for Jim's great paw. "Pulse! I ain't got any!" growled Jim.

"Oh, yes, you have. Here it is, in your wrist. Keep still for a moment."

"Stranger," said Jim after the doctor had dropped his hand, "d'y'e mean to tell me that ye kin feel a man's wrist and tell him what ails his insides?"

"Yes, in a measure."

"Excuse my not calling you a liar, but some of the boys will do it for me afore you are an hour older."

"What are your symptoms?" asked the doctor.

"Never had any."

"How do you feel?"

"Sick."

"How were you taken?"

"Stranger, what are you driving at?" demanded Jim, as he sat up in bed.

"Have you got pains?"

"In course I have! D'y'e spouse I'd be lying flat of my back here if anything less'n a ton was holding me down!"

"Do you ache?"

"Rayther!"

"Any fever?"

"Wal, I git away with a quart of water at a gulp."

The doctor sat and studied the case for a few minutes, and then he came over to the shanty where the committee had assembled and said:

"Gentlemen the case of Big Jim is a serious one. He needs a change of diet, scenery and air. My advice is that you brace him up as well as you can on beef tea and chicken soup, and then send him off for a trip to Cuba. I'll look at the other cases in the morning."

But he never did. When the boys found that he had come without even a dose of quinine, and they heard him talk about chicken soup and trips to Cuba for a man who hadn't five dollars to his name, they waited upon him in a sort of hilarious body, and at midnight he went up the trail at the rate of twelve miles an hour, with a crowd behind him aching for his ears as relics.

Next day we heated half a ton of rocks, took about six or eight blankets, and gave Big Jim such a sweat that all his toe nails shed off; and, rather than be cured in the same way, the other men in the hospital got well.

"I did have some faith in the chap," exclaimed Jim, "just a leetle bit until he axed my symptoms. That floored me. The idea of sending two hun-
